SELASSIE SAYS HE DOESN'T WANT TO GO TO WAR; ITALIANS DO

Delivers Stirring Proclamation
To 115,000 Warriors As
They Leave for Front

REVIEWS HIS TROOPS

War Dread Chills Europe
Deeper Than at Any Time Recently

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 17.—"It isn't your Emperor who wants to go to war; on the contrary, it is the Italians who are itching to fight," Emperor Haile Selassie declared in a stirring proclamation to 115,000 of his warriors as he sent them off to war.

Mixing sage advice of how to meet the better equipped Italian foe, with words of cheer, the Nagus preached a fatalistic point of view. "All of us will die from either typhus or pneumonia; it is much better to die for your country. The Italians will try to repulse us with machine guns; they have got machine guns, but we've got God on our side."

As the Nagus reviewed his troops a report ran through the line of troops and throughout the capital that the Ethiopian general offensive against Italy was about to be launched.

"My advice," said the Emperor to his troops, "is not to fight in the traditional old way of massing against the enemy, but follow the instructions of your leader. Do not get hot-headed because if the enemy finds you angrily gathered in groups they will burn you as logs in a fire."

"When the fighting actually begins and you are within range of the enemy guns, leave aside your shields and spears because they make flashing targets. Do not wash your shammals, let them get dirty and make you less visible."

LONDON, England, Oct. 17.—War dread chilled Europe deeper today than at any time since the Italo-Ethiopian conflict began as Great Britain prosecuted her economic and financial offensive against Italy at Geneva and practically put it up to Premier Laval of France to choose now between the Franco-Italian Alliance or collective security under the League of Nations.

With the combined home and Mediterranean fleets apparently ready to enforce a blockade against Italy if economic pressure fails, it was reported from Paris that Premier Benito Mussolini has replied to France's new peace move and that the reply is unsatisfactory to Britain. What Mussolini told Laval was not made public but British circles made no attempt to conceal the fact that Mussolini's ideas were not acceptable. Most unacceptable of all was the Italian thesis that negotiations must be made on the basis of the territory already conquered. Great Britain insists negotiations are impossible while Italian soldiers remain in Ethiopia.

LONDON, England, Oct. 17.—Acting quickly in the face of reports of armed conflict between British and Italian forces on the border between Egypt and the Italian possession of Libya, Great Britain today was understood to be rushing new forces to the Libyan border. The smoldering threat of an open clash between Great Britain and Italy spread from the sea to the land as the British government became frankly alarmed at Italian troop concentration on southern Mediterranean shores.

One Hundred and First Birthday Celebrated by Methodists

INTERESTING PROGRAM

YARDLEY, Oct. 17.—Over 200 persons attended the 101st birthday celebration held at the Yardley Methodist Church on Monday evening. Guests were seated at 12 tables appropriately decorated for each month of the year, in charge of twelve different organizations of the church. Miss Anna Wright was general chairman of the affair.

The feature of the evening was the procession of brides. Miss Nellie Gorton, organist of the church, played the wedding march, and Miss Hilda Van Artsdalen accompanied the soloists.

"Just a Song At Twilight," by Johnson Miller, opened the program, and Miss Kathryn Rothermel gave a reading, "The Bride." Two grooms were in charge of the pageant, and included Frank Sigafoos and Norman White. Two wedding guests included Miss Anna Worthington, wearing a gown of 1870, and Miss Ethel MacDonald, one of 1880.

In the first group of brides, Lois Ann Felger led wearing a flower girl's dress worn in the year 1853; the gown of Mrs. William LaBaw, 1853, worn by Catherine Brewer; Mrs. Joseph LaBaw wore the dress in which she was married in 1882; the dress worn by Mrs. Jacob Dilliplane in 1885 was modeled by her granddaughter, Miss Helen Dilliplane; Mrs. Grant Cooley's wedding gown worn in 1888 was worn by Edith Miller, and Mrs. Charles P. Dickey's, 1898, was worn by Miss H. Louise Thompson.

A solo, "Because," was rendered by Mrs. Francis C. Thomas, and a reading, "The Home," was given by Mrs. Jesse D. Bilbee.

The second group of brides were led by Miss Joy May Dilliplane and Eve May Dunsbury. Miss Margaret Labaw wore Mrs. William Hoffman's wedding gown of 1901; Miss Betty Cadwallader wore the bridesmaid's dress of Miss Anna Stockton in 1903; Mrs. William Buckman's gown of 1903 was worn by her daughter, Mrs. Harry Hoffman; Mrs. H. Linn Bassett wore her wedding gown of 1903, and the dress of Mrs. J. L. Eggleston, 1905, was worn by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elliott Eggleston; Mrs. Frank Sigafoos wore her wedding dress of 1905; Mrs. George Cadwallader's dress of 1913 was worn by her daughter, Miss Marjorie Cadwallader, and that of Mrs. Norman Ross, 1913, by her daughter, Miss Alice Marie Ross; Mrs. Spencer Park's, 1914, by Miss Dorothy Harle; Mrs. Willard Wright's, 1917, by her daughter, Miss Jean Wright, and Mrs. Walter H. Thompson's, 1918, by Miss Myrtle Coulton.

Miss Lillian Van Artsdalen and Mrs. Francis C. Thomas favored with a duet, "Oh Promise Me," after which the latest group of brides were presented. The flower girls for this procession were Betty Thomas and Martha Bennett. Miss Virena Bennett wore the dress of Mrs. Jesse D. Bilbee, 1929; Mrs. William Felger wore her bridal gown of 1929 and Mrs. Aaron Eisenbrey her dress of 1930; Miss Helen Dunsbury wore the gown of Mrs. William Balderston, 1931.

Mrs. Alvin Blaker, who was married two years ago on October 14, was preceded by her bridesmaid, Miss Ida Blaker, as were the two brides of 1935. Miss Anna Wright was bridesmaid for her sister, Mrs. Arthur W. Blaker, and Miss Evelyn DeGraves was maid of honor for Mrs. Norman S. White.

Miss Betty Cadwallader gave a reading, "To the Bride and Groom," and Mrs. Thomas and Miss Van Artsdalen sang, "I Love You Truly," and the program was closed by a cornet solo, "At Dawning."

Refreshments were served by the committees in charge of the various tables.

STILL SPENDING $2 FOR $1

The Roosevelt Administration still is spending $2 for every $1 the Treasury takes in. Official Treasury Department figures disclose this. From July 1 to October 7, 1935, according to the daily Treasury statement, government expenditures totaled $2,909,461,366; government receipts were $1,073,668,959. That means a deficit on October 7 of $935,792,406, compared to a deficit of $617,704,673 for the same period a year ago. We are going "in the red" 50 per cent faster than we were 12 months ago.

BUCKS CO. REALTOR LAUDS MANAGEMENT WHICH GIVES THE COUNTY LOW TAXES AND OTHER ADVANTAGES TO ATTRACT RESIDENTS

J. Carroll Molloy Tells Doylestown Kiwanians Many New Residents Are Attracted to Bucks County Because of Good County Management, Fine Schools, Scenic Beauty and Old Stone Houses

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 17.—"Bucks county has no funded debt and our county is not mortgaged; that is one of the reasons why people like to move here to make their permanent home," declared J. Carroll Molloy, of Doylestown, prominent realtor, in a talk before the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club at the Doylestown Inn.

Mr. Molloy, a past president of the Rotary Club of Doylestown, told why people are coming to Bucks county from distant points to make their permanent home.

He particularly emphasized the good management of the county affairs that has resulted in a low tax rate, one of the most important things necessary to get new people, and a condition that is really appreciated by new home buyers.

"Not only is the county not mortgaged but very few of the townships have a debt," Mr. Molloy declared.

Internationally known writers, artists, manufacturers, retired business and professional men, teachers, professors, and others are among the steady stream of new home buyers in Bucks county and the list of newcomers is growing rapidly, Mr. Molloy explained.

Many of the new residents come from New York and the northern New Jersey section where taxes are simply forcing people away.

"Many of the new people are attracted here by their friends who came before them but the old stone farm houses of Bucks county, are really bringing most of the new residents," Mr. Molloy said. "Unfortunately the number of old stone farm houses do not increase."

Mr. Molloy said that last Saturday a retired chemical engineer who has lived in every part of the world, came to him to purchase a home in Bucks county.

"I asked him why he came to Bucks county," Mr. Molloy said. "He told me that he had lived all over the world and had decided on Bucks county for its natural beauty and was astounded at the low price of attractive places in the county, the low taxes and the picturesque old stone houses which he liked more than anything else. He told me that nowhere throughout the country, had he seen as many attractive stone houses as in Bucks county. Mr. Molloy said that he sold a farm yesterday to a New York City business man who has an airplane and who will use it to travel from his new home in Bucks county to New York City daily. Yesterday this newcomer landed his plane on the grass field of his newly-purchased farm.

"Airplane travel between Bucks county and New York City will be quite common for business men within a short period of time, I feel certain," Mr. Molloy declared.

"From my office in Doylestown to the Holland Tunnel, is approximately 65 miles, and it can easily be driven in one hour and thirty minutes over a new concrete highway."

"Philadelphia prospects as home-buyers in Bucks county have dwindled materially during the past two years, and most of the prospects now come from New York City and New Jersey. The most popular section that is sought by prospective buyers is located east of Doylestown. One section in Tinicum township is particularly beautiful, and although there is no electric service there now, it will in the very near future, be available and I predict that within a short period of time, most of the places in that locality will be sold."

Mr. Molloy also mentioned the fine schools, both private and public schools available for the residents of the rapidly developing colony east of Doylestown. He particularly mentioned the fine high school in Doylestown, and Doylestown's fine shops and stores that he said were far above par for a town of its size.

"Many of the new New York residents of Bucks county shop in Doylestown every Saturday morning," he pointed out. "You will see almost as many New York license tags on cars parked in the business sections Saturday morning as Pennsylvania licenses."

Mr. Molloy also stated that it was his opinion that we are at the beginning of a new era of higher prices for real estate in Bucks county.

"It seems ridiculous that many farms are selling today for less than it cost to put the buildings on them, but that condition will soon change," he added.

TOMATO CROP CUT 50 PERCENT BY RAIN

County Agent Gives Account of Crop Production for Season

TO BE PLENTY OF APPLES

Summing up the results of the crop production in Bucks county during the past Summer, County Agent William F. Greenawalt stated that with but few exceptions the yield of the season just being brought to a close has been above average.

These several exceptions were potatoes, tomatoes, oats and cantaloupes. The potato crop, according to Mr. Greenawalt, was cut short during the past season because of the wet spells which were followed by intervals of intensely hot weather.

The tomato crop, according to the county farm leader, suffered the most, and that was during the latter part of the Summer. Growers of tomatoes in both the upper and lower portions of the county had looked forward all Summer to excellent yields, but toward the end of the season, the first week in September, there was a continuation of rain which resulted in cutting down the production by about 50 per cent. The rain also proved a ruin to a large extent to the cantaloupe crop. This was particularly the case in the lower part of the county.

Oats, because of the hot weather in June and July, also suffered to a great extent.

Growers of spinach and broccoli during the past two weeks have been having heavy losses because of the advent of the aphids. The yield was excellent, but when the crop was harvested it was found to be badly infected.

Farmers throughout the county are at present in the midst of the corn harvest, and this crop promises to be unusually good. They are experiencing very little trouble in cutting the corn because it was not leveled to the ground to any extent because of storms the past season. Approximately 75 per cent of the corn has been cut, and in some sections the farmers are husking.

The apple crop this season, according to Mr. Greenawalt, will be unusually heavy, and the coloring is excellent. Where the orchards have been properly sprayed the orchardists experience little trouble with the apple crop. They have also been favored with the absence of high winds which frequently cause the apples to drop just at picking time.

Fall seeding of wheat, rye and winter barley is about completed, and this year a larger amount than usual of winter barley has been sowed. This crop is becoming quite profitable to the farmers in the county. Its feeding

State To Return Canal

Harrisburg, Oct. 17.—Holding the transaction was unconstitutional, Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti today ordered the return to the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company of a 40-mile section of the old Delaware Canal decided to the State in 1931.

If the company refuses to assume all obligations for maintenance of the center stretch, Margiotti charged, the entire waterways will revert to the Commonwealth.

Although the State by the 1931 deed assumed the "virtually worthless" center section, the company retained ten miles at each end, through which it sells water to power companies, Margiotti said. In addition to maintaining the center portion of the canal, he added, the deed required that beginning next year, the State pay $6,000 a year for water derived from the State's own rivers.

Constructed nearly a century ago, the canal was sold to the Navigation Company in 1858 with the agreement the company would always keep it in good repair. Failure to comply with the agreement would mean the return of the canal to the State, according to the provisions of the 1858 sale.

BASEBALL PITCHER ASKS $5,265 DAMAGES

Claims He Suffered Injuries,
Car Ruined, and Lost
Earning Power

HIT A PARKED TRUCK

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 17.—Claiming damages amounting to $5,265, Lawrence Terry, Trevoise semi-professional baseball player, took the stand in an action in trespass in civil court, here, Tuesday afternoon, with Pete Tursi, of Philadelphia, as the defendant in the case now on trial before Judge Calvin S. Boyer.

The 25-year-old pitcher testified that he was operating his roadster on a highway, near Davisville, January 2, when he collided with a truck operated by the defendant, which was parked on the highway without lights or flares.

Terry, who fractured his right arm in the collision, and suffered other injuries which prevented him from playing baseball, stated that his car was damaged to the extent of $265.

For medical care and attention he expended $55.

In his own behalf, he claims the sum of $5,000.

Included among the losses is his weekly earning capacity and about $150 in baseball fees which he would have received had he been able to use his arm to pitch.

The plaintiff is a member of a well known baseball family, four other brothers being engaged in the diamond sport.

His roadster, which was practically reduced to junk value was estimated to be worth about $15 after the crash.

The defendant is charged with neglecting to have lights on the truck or flares warning approaching motorists.

Terry, taking the stand, stated that the truck which was parked behind a tow car protruded out into the highway and that it was loaded with iron which stuck out from the rear without any light or marker on it.

He explained that he was unable to see the parked truck and tow car because he was blinded by the bright lights of another car parked on the opposite side of the road.

"It was impossible to see anything in the road because of the blinding lights and the next thing I knew I felt my head knocked against something and a pain in my head."

A jury about 6 o'clock on Tuesday

THE GOOD MONTH

The poets have ever sung the praises of stormy March, "with ugly looks and threats"; and fickle April, "when every tear is answered by a blossom"; and merry May, "when those who love must wed"; and chill December, "bleak and drear"; but do not all ordinary humans agree that colorful October were a better object for their art and eulogies.

"What is so rare as a day in June" unless it be an afternoon in October when the departing sun lends a tint and a mystic charm to all the purple and gold, yellow and brown and green of the trees, the hills and the fields? There is a freshness and a life-giving vigor about the air of October unknown to her sister months. October is a month of out-of-doors when nature exerts her utmost magnetism and all humanity strains at the leash of confining civilization.

The melancholists that have been attributed to October is but reflection and pensiveness. October days invite sober thought and speculation on the beautiful nature and the sheer joy of living. October is the rugged manhood of the year in all its glorious strength; it is symbolic of tasks begun and completed; it is a synonym for achievement.

AUTUMN TRAFFIC DANGERS

Right now the country is passing through the dangerous season from the traffic point of view. Autumn days have the highest accident rate of the year.

This can be attributed to a number of causes. During the morning and evening rush hours the light is imperfect but not sufficiently so to make driving with lights necessary. Accidents are the inevitable result. Nor is the presto tempo of summer traffic moderated until snow and ice make it mandatory. This is also the season of wet, slippery pavements and low visibility.

There is also a tendency at this season for both the driver and the pedestrian to quicken their pace under the urge of brisk, frosty mornings and the early and rapid fall of night. And when traffic rushes headlong the papers have something to write about.

Once warned of the dangerous days it behooves every man, woman and child to exercise at least one more ounce of caution if not out of consideration for others then for reason of personal safety. There are a dozen traffic "don'ts" which might bear repeating at this time but one injunction covers them all—Keep your eyes open and your mind on the serious business of walking or driving.

SYNOPSIS

To offset the gossip attendant on the notoriety accorded the marriage of her fiancé, Kent Damerell, to the supposedly dying Cora Manning, his former sweetheart, Sharlene Standing, young California society girl, marries Stuart Pennington, a struggling, young artist. Kent had granted Cora's plea that they marry, both believing she would die, but Cora recovers. Sharlene's thoughts are all of Kent, but she tries to be fair with Stuart and tells him she wants to be a real wife to him. He says he can wait for her love. Sharlene enters into a life of gaiety to forget . . . and the faithful Stuart follows, trying to shield her from serious harm. One night Sharlene goes to Stuart's room. He does not hear her enter. Sharlene finds him with his head on the table, arms outstretched, fingers clenched. She realizes then the silent battle Stuart is fighting because of his love for her and chides herself for being unfair.

CHAPTER XX

Sharlene decided to treat this as sensibly as she had the money complex. She moved into the moonlight and stood looking down at him with a shadowy smile. Still he did not hear her. Then she turned and lifted her hand to the curtain, stretching up on tiptoe, not quite reaching it.

Stuart sat up suddenly and saw her there. "Hold it!" he whispered. "Don't move!"

He was feeling in the drawer of the table for pencil and drawing paper. Startled, she had dropped her arm at his first word and turned to him in bewilderment. Then at his look of disappointment she understood.

"Oh, I see—you want to draw me. I'll do it again." She reached for the curtain and held the pose, laughing at herself silently. She had intended to be so noble and condescend to be a wife. But—she was only interested in her as a work of art! She was a little piqued as well as amused, but not at all hurt as she would have been if she had loved him as she did Kent.

In complete absorption, he drew in the lines of her lovely body, poised on tiptoe, reaching, silhouetted against the moonlight, veiled in the diaphanous chiton of her night gown.

Stuart threw down his pencil abruptly and sighed. "I didn't get it—the elusive mystery of a moonbeam." He jumped suddenly to his feet and came to her, gathering her into his arms. "Sharlene—loveliest!"

His lips found hers. She hadn't been mistaken after all! She clung to him and found she liked his sager embrace.

In the morning, when she struggled up from profound depths of sleep, Sharlene did not remember Stuart at first. She was so filled, so saturated with dreams of Kent Damerell. Kent's face, smiling, pleading, adoring, pale with love, had hovered over her all night. She awoke to a surge of great happiness, such as she had not known for weeks. She lay for a moment, dazed with pure joy, soaking in it, sinking into it with all her being gratefully, humbly.

Then came the inevitable awakening. The shock, the disappointment, the old pain creeping back. Intolerable, crushing, stifling! She flung out her arms and cried aloud. "Stuart!" She turned her head remorsefully, but her husband's head was not on the other pillow. . . . Dear Stuart. . . . Dear, blessed, tender Stuart. . . . What infinite sweetness and tenderness!

If Stuart were only Kent—no, no, she must not think that! But oh, to be able to respond to love—Oh, Kent, Kent, darling, darling!

Agonized weeping—for the second time in her life. She found time to be thankful, even as the sobs tore from her tortured throat, that Stuart was not there this time to see her distress.

An hour later, quiet, self-possessed, dressed for her ride, she sought him lying on the beach. She found him lying, face down, on the sand. He lay very still, but there was something forlorn in his pose. She stood near him and hesitated to speak, looking down at him anxiously. Her heart smote her guiltily. Had he guessed?

Yes, Stuart knew that he had failed to drive out the specter at the marriage feast. He had hoped so much for the time when Sharlene should come to him—of her own volition. He thought he might teach her to love him—then. But he knew now that when she held him in her arms, she was thinking of Kent. The thought was intolerable! But he must be patient, perhaps it was too soon—too soon. . . . If only she did not hate him this morning. . . .

Sharlene moved away some little distance. Then she called out, trying to sound casual: "Oh, Stuart! Where are you?"

That gave him time to collect himself. He rose quickly from the sand and went to meet her. He looked at her anxiously. She did not meet his eyes, but she squeezed his hand frantically. That was reassuring.

"I forgot to tell you—we're riding with the Army at ten. You'll have to hurry to dress."

"Oh, all right. You're ready, aren't you?" She stood in her jodhpurs—slender, gallant, young. She met his eyes bravely at last, and there was only tenderness there.

"Look, Stuart, I've been thinking. The Shingo Maru sails for the Orient tomorrow. Let's go!"

"Wh-what?"

"Please, dear. It would mean so much to you. This mystic quality of yours will gain by contact with that ancient culture. Great works will come of it—"

"Do you care, Sharlene—about the great works?" He smiled whimsically at her.

"Of course I do! But I'll be honest about this—I want to run away again."

"Do you still want me—to run with you, Sharlene?"

"Yes, yes!" She clung to his hand. "I need you so, Stuart!"

"All right. We'll run just as far and fast as you want to. And now I reckon I'd better get ready for the Army."

"I'll wait here." Sharlene sank down on the sand.

As Stuart hurried toward the hotel, he came upon Forrester already at work, absorbed in transferring to his canvas the pearly morning light across the jade sea. "Hello!" Stuart stopped short, his fingers itching, longing for the feel of the brushes. The old man looked up briefly and grunted, then went on working.

"I hear you married a rich wife, Pennington."

"Yes."

There was a long pause, while Forrester smeared color across his canvas.

"What are you going to do next?"

"We—we're going to the Orient."

"I see. . . . Well, I'll bet right now that you'll never do another honest stroke on canvas."

Stuart's jaw tightened and his blue eyes flashed. But he did not answer. He would prove, concretely, that prophecy false—when Sharlene would quit running—away.

The flight of Sharlene and Stuart over Asia was like the restless darting of humming-birds. Never stopping for more than a sip of that ancient culture Sharlene had held out to Stuart as a lure. Always whirling madly to some particular place to meet people—to dine and play bridge and dance, and ride and converse gaily. And then dashing to the next place to meet other people—and dine and play bridge and dance and ride and converse gaily.

To Stuart, who loved humanity, this skimming the surface of human relations was disappointing. How and there, in passing, he saw a face that held him, a rich personality which might have been of priceless value to him. But there was never time to know anyone—even Sharlene!

He said to her one day, "Sharlene, did you ever try the fun of just sitting still and doing nothing?"

His wife looked at him indignantly. "I don't dare to; I don't dare contemplate what a mess life is."

He flinched, and she was instantly sorry and flew into his arms to kiss him and tell him everything else was flat and stale—but him. Yet they never sat down together to talk—to get acquainted—to let love grow, except for that unforgettable night at Jai Samand, in Rajputana, in the heart of India.

They had been inordinately lucky in incurring the favor of the Maharana of Udaipur, the "Sun of the Hindus," to whom they came with letters of introduction from a high British official. His Highness was just sending an expedition into the jungles—Aravalli Hills. His immense entourage—including camels carrying tents, and elephants and Arabian horses carrying courtiers—was ready.

His Highness looked deeply into the blue eyes of the American artist and divined there the mystic dreams and longings, the resignation and the patience of his own ancient race. He turned to Sharlene and saw the tragic hurt underlying the brave brightness of her spirit. His heart warmed to them both.

"I should like you to see the marble dams," he said. "They are for eyes like yours to see. Particularly Jai Samand. Jai Singh built it almost three centuries ago. It is the loveliness of a dream, caught and hardened into marble."

Stuart and Sharlene were enchanted. Rarely was this privilege accorded to outsiders.

His Highness smiled at their enthusiasm. "You would like to ride an elephant, Mrs. Pennington?" He clapped his hands softly and a servant came running to receive his orders. Then he turned back to Sharlene: "I have sent also for a veil for you to wear against our hot Indian sun and dust."

When he put it into her hands, Sharlene exclaimed: "Oh, the lovely thing! It's a purdah veil, isn't it, perfumed with the roses of Kashmir? Handwoven. See Stuart, so delicate that you can draw it through a finger ring!"

"I have given orders," their host told them, "to have you go alone up to the Wind Palace, on the crest of the mountain above the lake. There you will see the moon rise. You will think," and he smiled softly, "that you have never seen her full glory before."

Beginning already to be wrapped in the spell of the past, they took their places in the swaying silken howdahs, and their elephants joined the great colorful procession headed toward Jai Samand.

The gate at lake finally shimmered beneath them, and their eyes sought eagerly the historic dam—a dream that had been caught and hardened into marble. There it lay, across the ravine, imprisoning the waters of a mountain stream. A dream of incredible beauty. On the buttresses, white marble elephants were in postures of trumpeting tirelessly. Above the dam were graceful white marble pavilions awaiting in vain the music of other days.

High on the hillside, the palace stood with its exquisitely carved balconies—swept and garnished by caretakers, but empty down through the years.

That evening Stuart and Sharlene rode up the tortuous path to the Wind Palace alone. They had the old seraglio to themselves, and recounted to the roof court where they looked out on the lake through lace arches of white marble. The mountains surrounding them were wild and uninhabited. They were alone in a vast, waiting silence that other than they had ever been before. The dusk deepened and the great stars began to glow.

"Talk to me, Stuart," she begged. "It's all so—so lonesome!"

"It isn't lonesome," he reassured her. "Jai Singh built this place for love—as well as to study the stars. Can't you see him lying here at his ease, studying astronomy, while his ladies made soft music?"

Sharlene stretched herself out on the floor, pillowing her head on her arms, and gazed up at the stars.

"They're very close and appalling intimate, those stars, Stuart."

"Come over here—where I can touch you."

He lay down beside her and picked out the constellations one by one. A soft wind began to sigh through the delicate marble arches.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY—Without Starvation Diets, Harsh, Exhausting Salts or Weakening, Irritating, Habit-Forming Laxatives.

There's a reason why so many people find eating hard and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right. All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with methods that are hard, futile or depend on harmful, health-racking salts and laxatives for their action. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every bottle so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists. Advertisement.

HISTORIANS OF COUNTY MEET IN TINICUM

TINICUM, Oct. 17.—Sixty members, a few friends and guests attended the autumn meeting of the Bucks County Historical Society held in Christ's Lutheran Church, here, Saturday afternoon, with the Rev. Allen S. Fisher as the host.

As the assemblage of people from all sections of Bucks county interested in the history of the county was regarded as a part of the 175th anniversary celebration of Tinicum Lutheran Church, the host, clergyman, Rev. Fisher, read a paper on the "History of Christ's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Tinicum, Penna.," which will appear as part of his book known as "Lutheranism in Bucks County," almost ready for publication.

Rev. Fisher was presented by Dr. B. F. Packenthal, Jr., president of the society, who presided.

Business of the meeting included the election of four new members into the society. They were Mrs. Charles H. Shive, of Doylestown; Dr. F. D. Packenthal, of New York City; Mrs. Charles Stuart Spong and David L. Watson, both of Newtown.

Among the guests were Charles S. Boyer, president of the Camden Historical Society, of Camden, New Jersey, and the secretary of the Lehigh County Historical Society, Charles R. Roberts.

The curator of the Bucks County Historical Society, Horace M. Mann, served as secretary.

A thesis on "Buckwampun Historical and Literary Society," of which the writer was a member, was read by Lewis Sigafos, of Doylestown, and will be published in The Intelligencer.

With the aid of a map, indicating the vastness of Bucks county which at that time included Monroe, Pike and almost all of northeastern Pennsylvania, Dr. B. F. Packenthal spoke of the fraud perpetrated in the Indian Walk Purchase.

Commenting on the name of Tinicum with its Indian significance rather than that of Wormansville he advocated omitting the "ville" from such well-known Bucks county places as Pipersville, Riegelsville, Kintnersville, Trumbauersville and others.

Recently, he pointed out that Bedminster has dropped the latter syllable of "ville" just as Yardley is a shortening of "Yardleyville." "I think 'Gintners,' 'Trumbauers,' 'Pipers' and 'Riegels' would be very much more to the point, and in keeping with the touch of modernity."

At the conclusion of the meeting, members and guests had an opportunity to visit several old graveyards rich in past historical background, including the grave of Edward Marshall, exponent of the ill-starred walking purchase, the unfairness of which was responsible for the terrible Indian massacres and the cause for the Indian-French war alliance.

County Seat residents in attendance included Rev. and Mrs. Bernard Re-pass, Sister Lena, of the Tabor Home; Mrs. Horace M. Mann, Mrs. Charles H. Shive, Miss Helen Porter, George MacReynolds, Warren S. Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sigafos and others.

Bucks County Realtor Lauds County Management

"More than $250,000 has been spent in Bucks county by new home owners from the New York and New Jersey sections since last January 1, from my own knowledge, and that is the result of sales made by just one real estate office," Mr. Molloy declared.

"I want to appeal to Kiwanis to appreciate their county more and to boost it every time that you have an opportunity for you have things here that no other section of the world has, in addition to an added new citizenry that is a great honor to any county in the United States."

Old Member Returned

Harris Wagner, classification, baker, was welcomed back to membership last night by the club president, Dr. John J. Sweeney. Birthday greetings were extended to Kiwanian Alden B. Owen.

Plans were also announced for a Kiwanis stag Halloween party to be held at the Water Wheel Tavern, Tuesday night, October 29.

Convention Report

Deputy Prothonotary Charles D. Kohl, who together with Louis Moerman, Jr., were delegates to the state convention of Kiwanis in Lancaster two weeks ago, reported on the convention last night.

The achievement contest awards were announced at the convention as follows: Gold division, Scranton; silver division, Chester; blue division, Tarentum; white division, Ellwood City.

Officers elected in Pennsylvania Kiwanis for 1936 include the same governor, Frank Finley, of Wilkinsburg, and the same lieutenant governor for the southeastern division, Clarence Conner, of Chester. Donald E. Eaton, of Wilkinsburg, was re-elected secretary, and Richard H. Lamberton, was elected treasurer.

Kiwanian Kohl said that one of the outstanding addresses at the convention was given by Dr. William J. Carrington, of Atlantic City, past president of Kiwanis International, who spoke on "Sharing Wealth, How?"

"Kiwanis has its own share-the-wealth plan, voluntary and economically sound, Dr. Carrington declared," Kohl said. "And then he added, Kiwanis plows nothing under and does not abstract from the total wealth."

Dr. Carrington, in his address, Kohl reported, said that for two decades Kiwanians have been sharing their wealth of silver and gold with underprivileged children. These sharings, he said, for the most part widow's mites, have been in the form of braces, glasses, operations, camps, playgrounds, scholarships and a thousand and one similar projects."

Kiwanis Kohl said that Dr. Carrington warned the convention delegates that destruction of food will not bring prosperity. By no means, he said, can we create wealth by destroying it. The economy of scarcity is utterly indefensible, Dr. Carrington said. He warned against the rise of Fascism and reminded Kiwanians that Hitler and Mussolini are but .55 seconds removed from America by radio and that we cannot pull down an asbestos curtain to protect ourselves from what they have to say.

Pittsburgh was selected as the city for the 1936 state convention.

Elect Officers For Trevose Floral Group

Last evening's meeting was featured by an excellent display of Fall flowers, for which prizes were awarded five persons.

At the conclusion of the business session an excellent address which described life on what is known as Gaspe Peninsula, in the St. Lawrence river, near Quebec, was given by Dr. John Maye, of near Boston, and president of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

Dr. Maye illustrated his talk with very beautifully colored slides and motion pictures. Since 1933 Dr. Maye has made 10 trips to this peninsula, of which he first heard because of its colonies of birds, in which he is greatly interested.

This peninsula was described by Dr. Maye as being the northeast terminus of the Appalachian Range. Dr. Maye stated this is a very interesting part of the country from the standpoint of the botanist, and he showed some very beautiful slides of the many wild flowers.

Members of the society were informed that the individual visiting this peninsula does not have to be a geologist in order to appreciate the rock formations. The speaker also showed a number of pictures of the mountains covered with large, white gannets, diving birds.

People living on this peninsula, said Dr. Maye, speak French. They lead a very simple life, living mainly on fish and potatoes. All bread is baked in out-of-door ovens.

The summer season is quite warm, but very short. The place, it was said, is located far enough north so that the northern lights can be seen every night.

50,000 MICE ON MARCH

FOCCHOW — (INS) — An army of mice, estimated at between 30,000 and usually unfavorable, and as a result 50,000, invaded the town of Scheng-chong, in Fukien. They were moving from their home in a cave near Schengchong to another some miles distant, and marched through the town in orderly formation. Cats and dogs ran for shelter, while most of the inhabitants of the town took refuge behind locked doors. Twelve hours passed before the last of the mice had left the town, having devoured huge quantities of food on the way.

CONCERNING THE OFFICE OF CORONER

Democratic County Chairman Disparages a Respected and Honored Profession

In a recent issue of the Democratic newspaper of Bucks County appeared the following:

"Why should the voters of Bucks County support a Veterinarian for Coroner as opposed to a skilled physician and surgeon like Dr. Taylor?"

Webster S. Achey, County Chairman

This attempted slur on a candidate's profession has already made hundreds of votes for Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, the Republican candidate for Coroner.

The personal, business and professional qualifications of Dr. Moyer, a former high school principal and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, need no defense.

—AND—

There is no law, rule or custom requiring that the office of Coroner be held by a person of any particular occupation, business or profession.

In the neighboring county of Northampton, THE PRESENT DEMOCRATIC CORONER AND CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION IS A VETERINARIAN. His Republican opponent is a painter and decorator.

In Delaware County, the candidates are respectively, an undertaker and a physician.

In Montgomery County, the present Coroner is a Health Officer and the Republican candidate is a real estate agent.

In Chester County, the Coroner is a farmer—and so on all over the State, men in all walks of life hold this office.

VOTE FOR DR. H. CLAYTON MOYER FOR CORONER OF BUCKS COUNTY

An efficient, capable administration of the office.

A "bargain" is sometimes a bargain--

A GOOD many people look on August as their lucky month — and we don't mean those who spend it lying on the sand and taking in salt air.

We mean those people who have formed the habit of buying things when other people aren't... porch rugs and luggage and towels and lamps and all sorts of things, for use now and for use next season.

Of course they have learned that "bargains" are not always bargains. They know how to recognize quality and style and worth, how to find the strong points and how to avoid weaknesses. And much of their knowledge has come from the advertisements in this newspaper.

All of us follow advertising, but some people study it so thoroughly that they know exactly what they want and where to get it. They are the ones who find the real bargains. Their money buys more things and better things—in August and all through the year.

Here's One Woman Who Knew How To Reduce

Costs Next To Nothing To Lose 35 Pounds

If you have a will of your own and don't listen to gossipers who tell you there's no safe way to reduce—you can not only get rid of surplus fat but actually enjoy better health than you have for years—just take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning—tastes fine with juice of half lemon added.

So safe is Kruschen you can take it day in and out for years—thousands do just to keep gloriously physically fit. Jar 40c.

Mrs. Clara Christensen of Belmar, N. Y., writes: "Am on my 5th jar of Kruschen and reduced from 164 to 129 lbs. It's a wonderful product—makes you feel better."

No more laxatives — no more cathartics and no constipation when you take your daily dose of Kruschen. United Drug Store, Pal-Mar Stores Co., and druggists everywhere. — (Advertisement.)

"MY FAVORITE DISH --and-- HOW I PREPARE IT!"

—BY—
MRS. ANNIE R. ROSE
NEWPORTVILLE

Beet and cabbage relish is a most tempting dish, and those who are fond of it can seldom get enough of it. For this relish use chopped cabbage and cooked beets, one-third as much of the beets as the cabbage.

Then heat sufficient vinegar to suit the taste, add small amounts of sugar and salt, and two tablespoonsful of horse radish. Stir this mixture well and allow to cool. Pour over the chopped cabbage and beets.

The result is a beautiful and delicious addition to one's luncheon or dinner.

The amount of cabbage and beets used will depend upon the number to be served.

laugh at winter

WINTER holds no worries when you learn the secret of getting summer comfort in your home.

And that is—Koppers Coke.

This is the plus-value fuel that increases your comfort and leisure—while reducing your work. It takes less furnace-tending. Fewer trips up and down the basement stairs. Less shaking. And it leaves so few ashes! A small painful instead of the heavy barrels you get from ordinary fuels.

Koppers Coke actually contains more heat and comfort in every ton—the extra heat to make warm rooms out of chilly ones. Extra heat to warm your whole house quickly on cold mornings.

Extra heat to keep it summer-like all day long—without fuss or worry. Take winter in your stride. A ton of Koppers

Coke is the first step.

OUR GUARANTEE:

IRA THOMAS TELLS OF VALUE OF SPORTS

(By T. M. June)

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—"I don't know of anything that builds up a boy's character more than baseball and other sports."

So declared Ira Thomas, scout for the Philadelphia Athletics, last night at the first annual banquet of the Delaware River Baseball League, held in the Hotel Hildebrecht, which was attended by over 300 patrons of the league.

Continuing, the speaker said: "Parents should not hesitate to take their children to sporting events. For there the youth will be sure to see the champions of the sports who is sure to be one who does not drink, smoke in large quantities, or carouse around at night."

Thomas declared that many an athlete's career was cut short by not living a clean life. Many times the A's scout was forced to tear up contracts for players who had ability for playing but lacked the proper spirit of training. That mighty array of A's players which carried them to the championship, namely: Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons, Mickey Cochrane, Bob Grove, and Jimmy Dykes, did not drink and were in good training at all times. Connie Mack's wonders of 1914, in which he had the "million dollar" infield, had but one player who used tobacco and none ever tasted liquor.

"We are short of baseball talent in the big leagues today," related the baseball scout, "but the players we are looking for must be the hustling, up and going type, those who play because they love the sport. I've seen players who act on the ball diamond as if they weighed a ton or if they were standing on a dime and afraid to move off. Baseball today is a two million dollar investment and players of good character are needed. The days of the drinking ball players are gone and the managers are never worried as to whether they will have nine players on the field."

Thomas spoke of the origin of baseball in Green's School, Cooperstown, N. Y., when they used eleven players on a team. The first paid league was in 1871. The league continued without a black mark until 1919 when the year of corruption took place in the world series between the Chicago Americans and Cincinnati Reds, when eight players of the Chicago team sold out.

"Today we are trying to keep the sport as clean as the American flag," said Mr. Thomas, as he concluded his address by congratulating the Hulmeville team and with the quotation: "When you are called to the life beyond, you will not be asked if you won or lost, but how you played the game."

Thomas was the guest speaker of the evening, which was a marked success. A trophy, 14 inches in height, was presented to the manager of the Hulmeville A. A. team, Howard Black, by Manus Kline, donor of the trophy. Black received the symbol of championship and in a few words congratulated the league and the players of his club who co-operated with him in all ways.

Neal Nolan, president of the league, was toast-master and explained the forming of the circuit, while Alvin Pratt, secretary, and Richard Hopkins, treasurer, were called upon to give a brief on the work they performed throughout the season.

Burgess of Hulmeville, Samuel J. Illick, was the first speaker, and congratulated and praised the league and also stated he was proud to come from the borough that won the championship and took the laurels of the season. Other speakers called upon were: Charles Young, Wilmer Black, Jack Scullin, Thomas June, Leon Comly, and Manus Kline.

The managers present as introduced from the guest table were: Fred Hibbs, Edgely; Willard Leedom, Washington Crossing; Jack McGary, Dolington; Howard Black, Hulmeville; and Harry Sheppard, Lambertville. The members of the championship Hulmeville A. A. team are: Charles Afferbach, Howard Black, Wilson Holland, Lawrence Devlin, William Leigh, Morris Allison, Stanley Carlen, Leon Comly, John Elsenbrey, John Hemp, Warren Bilger, Isaac Watson, Anthony Paffenrath, Henry Mellor and Richard Hopkins. The umpires of the league were: William Dresley, Ross Gilbert, Edward Sullivan, John Chadwick, Edward Wilcox and Jack Gear.

The banquet opened in a unique style with Jack Gear, umpire, bellowing: "The batteries for tonight's game are as follows: Black and Afferbach, Hulmeville; Matthews and Hessman, Dolington."

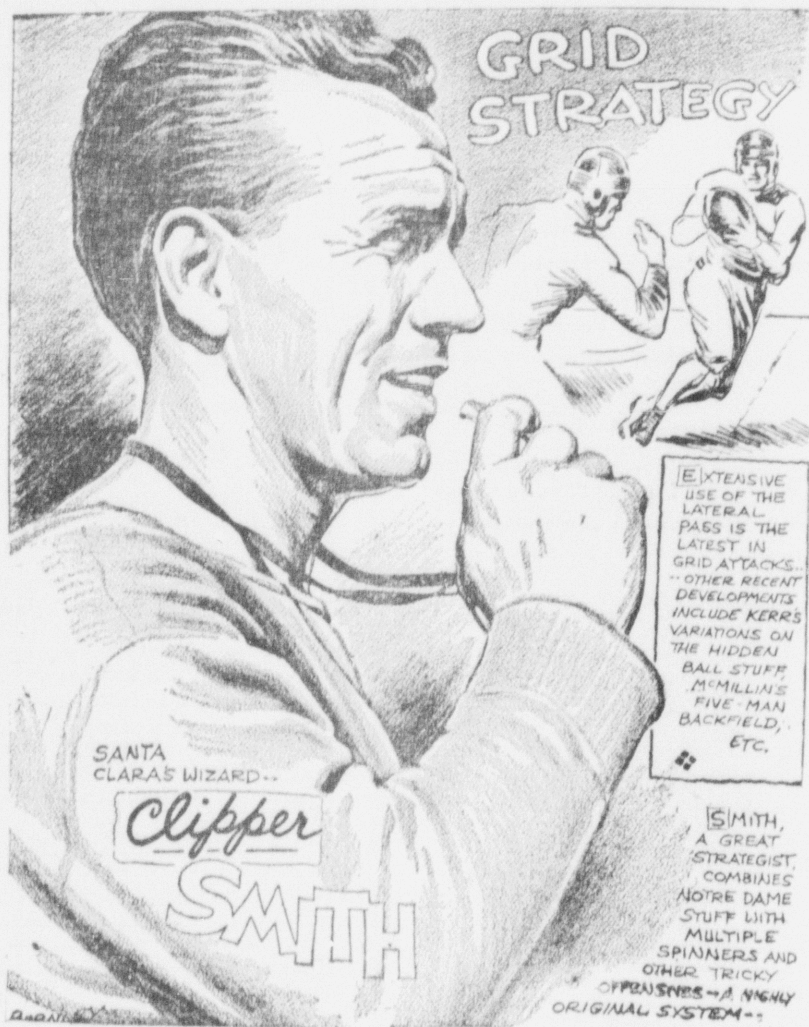

Entertainment was furnished by Christy, the accordionist, and Thomas Rowe, comedian and singer. After the banquet, dancing was held. The menu consisted of fruit cup, soup, roast potatoes, string beans, chicken on toast with gravy, olives, celery, rolls, butter, coffee, and ice cream.

PITCHFORK STABS GIRL

MUNICH — (INS) — Helping load a hay wagon, a Bavarian peasant girl was killed by a falling pitchfork. The fork, dropped by a fellow worker from the top of the loaded wagon, struck her in the neck. One of the prongs pierced her heart and killed her instantly. She had been married three weeks before.

Gridiron Innovators

By BURNLEY

As the years pass and the competition grows more intense, gridiron strategy becomes increasingly intricate and esoteric. Five-man backfields, multiple spinners, hidden ball stuff, triple reverse, complicated lateral and forward passing combinations pass before the eyes of the somewhat bewildered football fans in kaleidoscopic profusion.

One of the most original of the football mentors is "Bo" McMillin, the old Prayin' Colonel from Kentucky, who is now gridiron boss at Indiana University. He created quite a bit of consternation in the ranks of the Big Ten last season with that novel formation which he calls a five-man backfield. This year the Hoosiers may really go places.

There is no shrewder coach in Pacific Coast football than "Clipper" Smith, who builds formidable teams at Little Santa Clara. The Clipper is one of the numerous successful Notre Dame alumni now coaching on various college gridirons, but he is not exactly an orthodox Rockne disciple, having combined multiple spinners and other tricky forms of deception with a basis of Notre Dame football.

Santa Clara's intricate offensive, combined with a wealth of talented man-power, makes the Broncos one of the most feared teams on the Coast. They were extremely impressive in their opening game against San Francisco and are favored to beat California Saturday.

Another of the foremost figures among football innovators is little Andy Kerr of Colgate, whose lateral passing attack and hidden ball hocus pocus make up one of the most daringly original attacks in modern grid history.

Lou Little, Columbia strategist, has evolved a system of his own that is being widely copied; while Francis Schmidt of Ohio State and Ray Morrison of Vanderbilt are introducing Southwestern football styles into other sectors.

KASHEY WINS BOUT WITH ED MESKE

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 17.—Abe Kashy, hairy Syrian and crowd-baiter de luxe, won the feature wrestling match at the Arena last night before some 1,500 fans when his far-famed oil-color tactics led to his foe, Ed Meske, popular Ohio grappler, being knocked out.

The two had each won a fall and Meske had all the better of the going in the third when Kashy butted him out of the ring. In falling, Meske hit his head and, stunned, couldn't make the grade by the time Referee Matt Pol Janic, of West New York, had finished counting.

Meske succumbed to a barrage of fore-arm slugging followed by a body slam to lose the first fall in 34.26. Ed applied the noted "Indian death lock" to take the second in 7.08. The Ohio youth again applied the "death lock" in the third fall, but was so incantous as to bend near enough for Kashy to slug him in the stomach. Meske fell over backwards and, struggling to his feet, was jolted over the ropes and onto the floor as Kashy charged him. Ed was finally lifted back into the ring but was still only semi-conscious when the count was ended. Kashy weighed 210 to 215 for Meske.

Stealing a goodly share of honors from the windup was the 30-minute draw waged by Cliff Olsen, 204, Minnesota, and George Koverly, 215, of California. Mr. Koverly, who from now on shall be known as "Crybaby" because of his continuous tearful attitude, made a hit with the fans as one of the most snave villains to come out of the West in so many months.

Kiman Kudo, 170, of Japan, gave Dobie Osborne, 216-pound Texan, a lesson in the art of ju-jitsu, a style of wrestling in which most illegal tactics as practiced in America are permissible. Kudo finally made his foe quit after 9.52 when he applied a stranglehold, ordinarily one of the most heinous holds conceivable by modern villains. The two wore jackets, but after Kudo displayed a clever knack of pulling Osborne forward by grasping the jacket and then spinning him through the air to the canvas, the Texan tore the covering off.

BULLET IN HIM 36 YEARS

SYDNEY, N. S. W. — (INS) — Because it was an "interesting memento," a man here decided to leave undisturbed a bullet which has been in his abdomen for 36 years. It was recently revealed by an x-ray. Back in 1899, he recalled, while out shooting, his gun had exploded and a bullet entered his body. Doctors left it there because an operation would have been dangerous, but he thought it was out.

THE DEER PROBLEM AS FOUND IN STATE

By the Board of Game Commissioners

Once again the Pennsylvania "deer problem" has become glaringly apparent. It is today essentially the same problem which first appeared in the south-central section of the State in 1923, but the "problem center" now lies in the north-central counties. The severity of the situation is not so great as at certain times in the past, but it is nonetheless acute and steps must be taken to remedy present conditions or both the deer herd and the deer range will suffer unprecedented and irreparable losses.

The Pennsylvania deer problem arises from the fact that the nutritive requirements of the present deer herd exceed the food producing capabilities of the deer range. The gravity of the current problem is evidenced by the mortality recorded in the deer population during the winter of 1934-35.

From December 16, 1934, to May 1, 1935, the field officers of the Game Commission report having actually found in the woods a total of 964 deer which had died from pathological causes, that is, which had suffered abnormal deaths not resulting from causes such as old age, accidents, gunshot wounds, etc. The total number of deer which died from such causes was, of course, far in excess of the number actually discovered by the officers, but it is impossible to arrive at any fair approximation of the total in question and to study the problem at hand, therefore, the total deaths actually observed must be used for analytical purposes.

It was found that of the 964 deer found dead from pathological causes only 6, or less than 1%, died from poison; that 7, or again less than 1%, perished due to parasitism and disease; that 71, or approximately 7%, succumbed to unknown causes; while 881, or over 91%, were victims of malnutrition. Also, since it is entirely possible that a number of the deer reported dead from unknown causes succumbed to malnutrition, the fact can be clearly seen that the chief cause of the excessive mortality in the deer population during the past winter was the general state of malnutrition to which the deer herd was subjected.

This state of malnutrition was, of course, due to the fact that the density of the deer population throughout a large part of the deer range exceeded the carrying capacity of that particular portion of the range. As a result, many deer actually "starved" to death with full stomachs. Such a state of affairs seems impossible, but such, unfortunately, was indeed the case and the facts are easily explicable. The demand for food exceeded the available supply and all suitable and available food was consequently devoured without fulfilling the demand. The deer, therefore, consumed various greens, twigs and other materials in an attempt to satisfy their craving for food and in so doing filled their stomachs, but the material contained therein was so low in actual food value that although the stomach was full, the animals perished from lack of nourishment.

It is significant to note that many more immature (783) than mature (98) animals perished due to malnutrition. This fact can be readily explained. The younger stock probably require more succulent food material than do the older animals, but inasmuch as the more mature individuals can not only reach higher for food, but also have a better knowledge of where food is to be found, those animals devour the greater portion of the more desirable foods, leaving only the less desirable and less nourishing supply for the young stock. Also, the physical condition of mature animals renders them able to survive periods of adversity to which younger individuals succumb.

The general consensus of opinion is that the Pennsylvania deer range can properly support a deer population density of only 1 deer to every 35 acres of range. The number of pathological deaths recorded in the deer population during the past winter and the widespread and conspicuous overbrowsing of the range are clear indications that much of the deer range now carries an excessive and detrimental population density. Also, computations based on the 1934 kill of legal deer show that a large part of range now supports a population density in excess of 1 deer to every 25 acres of range. In other words, much of the Pennsylvania deer range is at the present time heavily over-loaded.

The current overloading to which the range is subjected is detrimental to both the deer herd and the deer range. The general state of malnutrition resulting from the overload on the range renders the deer herd liable to serious inroads by disease, while the excessive drain placed on the range will permanently reduce its food producing capabilities. It is, therefore, prerequisite to sound game management policies to correct extant conditions before the advent of the winter of 1935-36.

Since the food conditions on the range are extremely crucial only during the late winter and early spring, artificial feeding programs have been suggested as a solution to the deer problem. It is conceivable that by such procedure the death of many deer might be prevented, but the deer thus saved would merely form the basis of an ever-enlarging pyramid of overpopulation which would soon exceed the carrying capacity of the range even during the summer months. Thus, any such program would only defeat its own purpose.

The ideal method of correcting the conditions now extant would, of course, be to improve the deer range to such a degree that it could properly support the population densities to which it is subject. It is, however, entirely impossible to "repair the wagon with the load on board" and before any range improvement projects can be entered upon, the deer herd must be reduced and it does not seem at all probable that any range improvement projects will ever render the Pennsylvania deer range capable of properly supporting population densities in excess of 1 deer to every 30 acres of range.

Since the only apparent solution of the problem lies in the reduction of the deer herd, the means most suitable to the desired end must be found. Even a superficial concept of the problem will reveal the fact that a regular open season on male deer with two or more points to one antler will not result in the necessary reduction of the deer herd. Another winter without drastic thinning of the deer herd will undoubtedly result in the loss of the great percentage of the 1935 fawn crop and numerous mature animals together with serious range damage. It is a known fact that during the past twenty years the hunters of the Commonwealth have legally killed 216,826 male deer, but only 83,969 female deer. Due chiefly to this fact, the sex ratio of the Pennsylvania deer herd has become grossly out of balance and it is entirely possible that this unbalanced condition has produced even more serious and undesirable results than generally supposed. Since a carefully regulated open season on antlerless deer would result in the removal of many of the 1935 fawns which will be during the winter most susceptible to the inroads of malnutrition and since such a season would also tend to balance the sex ratio of the deer herd by the removal of does, does not such a season appear to be the most logical solution to the Pennsylvania deer problem?

RECS SIGN THREE NEW BACKS FOR BRISTOL SQUAD

In an effort to strengthen his backfield, Manager Eddie McDevitt and Coach George Dougherty will have three new faces in the squad tonight when the Recs line up against the Vans in a light scrimmage workout.

The newcomers are Jeff Jeffries, Alvy Johnson and Rusty Unruh. Both Jeff and Alvy played with Bristol A. A. when that team held sway at Eddington, while Rusty was fullbacking for High School and Fumans.

The addition of these men together with six already on the team will give Dougherty two complete backfields, something he has been sorely in need of in the two games played to date.

While all of the boys came through last Sunday's battle with but few minor scratches, they still have another struggle on their hands for this week, when the powerful Edge Hill Club of Glenside will attempt to put an end to their two-game winning streak.

The Hillers have not been scored on yet, but then, neither has Bristol, so a good game is in the making, as the Recs hope for an undefeated season.
